CLEVER GANG OF BUNCO MEN BUSY

Tourist Robbed of Diamonds by Smooth Operators, Who Use Ancient Trick.

Salt Lake, April 30.—Taxed to his wits' end, Chief of Detectives George Sheets has been working night and day in an attempt to round up a trio of the smoothest bunco men that ever operated in Salt Lake. They are said to have fleeced half a dozen tourists during the past ten days, and have performed the work with a method that places them in the ranks of the very cleverest exponents of the old game of three walnut shells and a pea.

Their last victim is J. C. Walker, a prominent merchant of Kansas City. Walker was invited to see the grave of Brigham Young Thursday afternoon by a stranger, who seemed to have the qualities of being a most congenial companion. At the grave the stranger suggested matching dollars. Walker had nothing but bills of large denomination. The stranger loaded him several silver dollars and the game proceeded.

Presently two other strangers came down the walk leading to the grave. Walker's newest acquaintance suggested that he knew a system by which it would be possible to fleece the newcomers. Because of the novelty Walker consented. Luck seemed failing in the direction of Walker and his friend. Suddenly the stakes were raised to big money. Walker had two diamonds, one in the form of a shirt stud valued at $665, and another in that of a ring worth $360.

When he became certain that there would be an opportunity to win from the strangers with the diamonds out up in wager the coin flipped on the wrong side and the strangers collected the diamonds. The newest acquaintance of Walker disappeared and simultaneously the other two strangers went away. Failing to stop them for an explanation, Walker went to police headquarters and talked the matter over with Chief of Police S. B. Barlow.

Makes Her Beneficiary.

"Sweet Millie, I do not know if you like this or not, but I think you are a sensible girl. I will make you my sole heir, whether we get married or not, and if I die before you and no one is married, I will make you my legal heir, but I hope that I will enjoy your company and association before that. Now, this is only talk. I don't expect to die, but I am just telling you what I mean. If we were together we could talk all this thing face to face—I will be over there some time this spring. I will let you know later and we will arrange things. We may get married in Vernal, and then go to Salt Lake."

"You shall not think that those post cards are of any consequence. It was only to show you Dragon from different points. We don't want to stay here till we can do better or worse. I like to make a few dollars and go in the chicken business."

"God bless you, my dear Millie. From your loving John."

The supreme court says that only in one place was there anything which might at all be considered as leaving a will and declares that if this had been the intention of Jensen, he would have made some mention of the property left. The love letter is therefore discarded as a possible will and not allowed to be probated.

PROMINENT LECTURER HERE

Mr. Christian D. Larson, the eminent psychologist and editor of the "Progress" magazine, published at Chicago, passed through this city today enroute to the coast, where he is to deliver a series of lectures in the principal cities of California. A number of Ogden's citizens went down to the capital to attend a lecture he delivered there on the 28th, and also saw him take the train at the Union Depot here.

Mr. Larson is still a young man and has a strong personality. At his lecture in Salt Lake, which was attractively listened to by a large and appreciative audience, he emphasized the possibilities of attaining ideals through the medium of right-thinking and consequent right-living. Among other things, he said, by right thinking, hence right living, one can secure an inexhaustible supply of health, which produces happiness. He said a very large per cent did not use anywhere near the amount of will power they possessed, but that the supply was inexhaustible. Among the hindrances to the cultivation of a strong will he classed alcohol, the indiscriminate dabbling in psychic matter, hypnotism, and the giving way to our emotions. He said there was no occasion to be nervous, if we would properly exercise our will power. His suggestion in securing a strong will was that of not following any human leader, but to follow the dictates of our own powers. To make a success of one's self, we should have a strong desire for the good things of life, and put our whole heart and energy into anything we attempted. At the same time he warned against doing anything in a spasmodic manner, saying serenity was an indication of power.

In describing concentration, he likened the majority to a wheel having a number of hollow spokes, with a hollow axle, the steam being introduced through the axle and the engine attached to one of the spokes, all of the rest of the power being allowed to escape. To get that to which we are entitled in life it is necessary to plug all of the hollow spokes, except the one attached to the engine.

LOVE LETTER NOT A VALID WILL

A love letter promising all of one's earthly possessions to the woman soon to be taken as a bride is not a valid will, the supreme court in an opinion handed down yesterday in affirming Judge John E. Booth of the Fourth district court in the contest of the will of John Jensen, who died at Dragon last year.

The suit came before the supreme court on appeal by Millie Green, fiancée of Jensen, who filed the love letter for probate and was denied this right. She claimed the letter to be the last will and testament of Jensen, but Judge Booth refused to admit it. The action was directed against Jens Jensen, brother of the decedent, who was made administrator of the estate. Justice J. E. Frick writes the opinion of the supreme court, affirming Judge Booth, and is concurred in by Chief Justice D. N. Straup and Justice W. M. McCarty.

Promise in Letter. The intention of Jensen to later make Miss Green his beneficiary is set forth in the letter, written shortly before the death of Jensen at Dragon, Utah county, but this is not held to be a will. Excerpts from the letter to Miss Green read as follows:
